Josh Becker Earns Endorsement of California League of Conservation Voters In Bid to Replace Ira Ruskin in State Assembly

PALO ALTO, CA – The California League of Conservation Voters (CLCV) announced that they would be endorsing Josh Becker in the 21st Assembly Districts Democratic Primary Election. The seat will be open this year after current Assemblymember Ira Ruskin is forced out of office by term limits.

“I’ve spent my entire career trying to use innovation to solve environmental problems and move California and the nation towards a clean energy future,” said Becker. “I am honored that CLCV thought enough of my past work and commitment to the environment to honor me with their endorsement. If elected, I will work tirelessly in Sacramento to show everyone that creative thinking and innovation can solve what look like insurmountable problems.”

“As a dedicated advocate for clean technology, green businesses and green jobs, the California League of Conservation Voters is confident that Josh Becker would be a strong champion for environmental values in the 21st Assembly District,” said Warner Chabot, CEO of CLCV.

CLCV is the non-partisan political action arm of California's environmental movement. CLCV's mission is to protect the environmental quality of the state by increasing public awareness of the environmental performance of all elected officials, working to elect environmentally responsible candidates, and holding them accountable to the environmental agenda once elected.

Josh Becker has lived in what now comprises the 21st Assembly District for 15 years. He has a BA from Williams College and earned a joint MBA/JD from Stanford. Prior to entering the Assembly race, Josh used his small business to focus on building coalitions and securing recourses for socially and environmentally responsible businesses and non-profits. Through his efforts GreenCitiesCalifornia.org is now providing a place for green-minded cities to share groundbreaking environmental policies with each other in an online ‘best practices’ forum.

The CLCV also endorsed Rich Gordon, another candidate in the race.
